They must take a stand.A stand that will cost lives."Ghost Town transported me back to a time (late 70's early 80's) when I was young and like a lot of my contemporaries found my life shaped by bigger events around us. It was an era when skin heads and racism led to many confrontations and a deep anger which was the catalyst of an exploration of identity and making a stand. I would not have entered the Theatre if it wasn't for those years and the coming together of many of us and the explosion of culture and music that has evolved and endured. Catriona captures these young hearts, full of hope and love

I found myself rooting for Baz and Maia right the way through, and came away with my own memories and humming all the songs from The Specials."Sudha Bhuchar, Artistic director of Tamasha; actor and playwright.Prsentation de l'diteur1981.
